Casey residents are making new college project a

Community Effort Casey County Community and Education Center on course for February completion

By Larry Rowell
Editor

Construction workers continue to make excellent progress on the new college in downtown Liberty, with the building now under roof.

Blaine Staat, Director of the Liberty Casey County Economic Development Authority, said the $3.5 million Casey County Community and Education Center is right on track.

"Everything is going well. There are no issues or work stoppages. It's a lot of fast paced work during the past three weeks with the roof going on," Staat said, adding Feb. 6 is the target date for completion of the building. Classes should begin next summer.

To date, Staat said that approximately $2 million has been raised through grants, government funding, corporate gifts, and private donations.

The most recent corporate gift came from Tarter Farm and Ranch, who donated $100,000. Casey County Bank also donated $100,000 to the project last year.

Even though smaller fund raising efforts such as Pizza Hut donating a portion of its sales to the college are helping, individuals are also doing what they can to donate.

Everything is going well. There are no issues or work stoppages. It's a lot of fast paced work during the past three weeks with the roof going on.

Casey County native John Coffey camped outside Memorial Coliseum in Lexington recently to get tickets for the annual Big Blue Madness event on Oct. 17.

"We got in line at 4 a.m. on Wednesday and they handed out tickets on Saturday morning," Coffey said.

Coffey, joined by Casey County natives Terry Randolph and Brandon McKinney, pooled their tickets and decided to donate the two best seats to be raffled off at The Apple Festival.

"I thought it would be something to help the college. Anything I can do to help Casey County, I want to do it," Coffey said.

For more information on donating tax deductible gifts to the college, contact EDA Director Blaine Staat at (606) 787-9973.

So you know

The facility will have eight classrooms, with six devoted to college classes and the remaining two rooms will be available for community and other educational purposes. The building will also feature administration offices, computer lab, student lounge, Workforce Investment Area office, and restroom facilities.

Three area colleges have committed to offer courses at the center — Somerset Community College, Campbellsville University, and Lindsey Wilson College.

Plans are for courses to be offered in English, Communications, Medical Terminology, Math, History, Sociology, Music, and Psychology, among others.

In addition, area high school students will have an opportunity to take dual credit courses at a reduced tuition rate.

City issues warnings about nuisance violations

By Larry Rowell
Editor

The City of Liberty is invoking its nuisance ordinance in an effort to get numerous property owners to mow their lots.

Eighteen letters were mailed to property owners on Sept. 11 telling them that their properties were in violation of the City of Liberty Nuisance Ordinance 99-0-05.

The letter states that the owners have five days to mow the weeds to avoid the issuance of a citation.

The ordinance states that a property becomes a nuisance when "weeds and grass in excess of a height of six inches on lots or other land upon which buildings are located and weeds and grass in excess of a height of 12 inches on lots, fields, or other land upon which no building is located."

The ordinance further states that should the property owner not mow the weeds within the five day period, the city then has the right to mow the property and bill the owner for the cost of materials and labor.

The property owner then has 30 days to pay the city.

If the bill isn't paid, then the city can place a lien on the property for the costs it incurred in cleaning the property.

Randy Dial, who has served as the city's zoning enforcement officer for the past seven years, said that most people mow the weeds after receiving the letter.

However, the warning letter may only spur a property owner into action to avoid the possibility of a penalty.

"What we've run into a lot in the past is you write them a letter, if they mow it and it goes on another month before it gets out of compliance again, then you have to write them another letter and just on and on and on," Dial said.

And what happens, Dial said, is the city has an ordinance without a lot of teeth in it.

"I tried to get them to pass something where for a second offense you didn't have to wait for that time

The Casey County Apple Festival turns 40

By Abigail Whitehouse
Staff Writer

Casey County's 40th Apple Festival has kicked off, with the weekend brimming with beauty pageants of all ages and sorts.

Katie Michelle Bouchard, 19-year-old daughter of Mike and Amy Bouchard from Owensboro, won the Miss Casey County title. Bouchard will move on to compete in the state pageant in January.

As is the custom, she will participate in an assortment of Apple Festival activities throughout the week and join the parade on Sept. 26.

Tyra Sengkhamyong,

17-year-old daughter of Kevin and Veronica Sengkhamyong of Dunnville, won the Miss Casey County Apple Festival. Sengkhamyong was chosen from among the Miss Casey County contesters and will accompany the new winners of the Little Miss and Mister pageants in local appearances and to the Kentucky State Fair in August 2015.

Festival activities

The 40th annual Apple Festival features a plethora of fun events for families and friends and proves that no county in Kentucky does it quite like Casey County.

Apple Festival organizer Deva Hair said there's a reason they chose 'Simply the Best' for this year's theme.

"We truly believe that we simply put on the best festival in Kentucky, where people can enjoy life, see old friends, and visit lots of local vendors," Hair said. "This year is going to be bigger and better than ever."

Events kick off today (Wednesday) at 5 p.m. with the county-wide devotional service on the Village Green behind the post office.

The 40th annual Casey County Apple Festival is now under way as the streets of downtown Liberty are scheduled to close tomorrow afternoon for the remainder of the week. Here, those streets were filled with vendors and festival-goers at last year's festival.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Politics is more than a matter of race

I think it is ridiculous for most of the media, liberals and in particular, black liberals, to label those who oppose President Obama's destructive domestic and weak foreign policies as racist. They claim it is only because Mr. Obama is black. That claim is false and again, so ridiculous.

Now here is something that in fact would be racist using the standards of those who make such claims — let's suppose that in the last presidential election, Mitt Romney (the white candidate) had received some 96 percent of the white vote against Mr. Obama (the black candidate) who in fact did receive some 96 percent of the black vote against Mitt Romney. I think it is not a stretch to say those white voters would have been immediately labeled as racists. Now if that would have made them racists, then what does it make of the 96 percent of the black voters who voted for Mr. Obama? Why can't we be consistent when we label people as racists? To be fair, it must work both ways whether we are black or white, liberal or conser-

As I've said before, the current crowd of liberals in Washington, D.C. Is destroying our country — taking away our freedoms, weakening our military, destroying our economy. Just a few examples are a disguised dictatorial control plan, i.e. Obamacare, the Benghazi disaster, IRS scandal, NSA scandal, VA scandal, Obama releasing terrorist enemies, etc. It makes one wonder sometimes about whose side they are on, or who they are working for, America or our adversaries? It seems they are working to reduce America to the level of the so-called third world countries as if that would make our enemies like us. How ridiculous and how dangerous that kind of thinking is.

Conservatives must keep control of the House of Representatives and take back control of the U.S. Senate in November and hopefully the presidency in 2016 in order to have any chance at all to save our country from total destruction. Hopefully it isn't already too late.

Wants a slice of pie

When I applied for the staff writing position at The Casey County News I'll be honest, I didn't know much about the county.

In an effort to familiarize myself with the area, I began my Google search.

I wanted to find the most unique aspects of the community, the people and events that really made this a special place.

Of course it didn't take me long to find the one event that sets Casey County apart from the rest — the Casey County Apple Festival.

I couldn't believe that the world's largest apple pie had been right down the road from me for most of my life and I had no idea.

Ten feet of warm, apple goodness and somehow my sniffer missed it!

Needless to say, since I started this job in the spring, I have been anxiously counting the days until fall for my chance to finally dip my fork into a big ole slice.

As if 10 feet of apple pie isn't enough, I heard rumors of an oversized chocolate chip cookie and a humongous pizza.

Could it be?

After hearing this, I thought perhaps I had walked into some sort of non-calorie counting dream land where all the food was oversized and anyone could help themselves to the bountiful feast.

I pictured myself writing articles and stuffing my face with the finest pies, cookies, and pizza in all of the land.

This talk of cookie, pies and pizza is true I've been told, at least during the latter part of September, when the streets are filled with festival goers and food vendors.

And after a long summer of hungry waiting, the time has finally come and my taste buds are more than ready to experience the wonders that the Casey County Apple Festival has to offer.

I've already made an agreement with my waist, which promised not to expand too much during this week, (so long as I am prepared to jog every day for the next three weeks).

If you were to ask me whether this gigantic, epic apple pie had anything to do with my decision to work in Casey County, I would have to admit its quite possible.

Ok, its quite true.

I want a slice of that humongous pie!

Domestic violence has to stop now

The news of late has contained stories about pro football players who are accused of physically manhandling their girlfriends, fiancées, and or wives.

One player, Jonathan Dwyer, headbutted his wife, breaking her nose. He is also charged with throwing a shoe at his 17-month-old son.

And because she refused to have relations with him, he punched her in the face. Nice.

Dwyer signed a one-year contract with the Arizona Cardinals for $795,000.

Three other players are also facing suspensions from their teams and the National Football League.

Another player, Greg Hardy, who plays for the Carolina Panthers, is also accused of domestic violence.

Hardy was convicted in July of assaulting his girlfriend. He has asked for a new trial, which is scheduled for November.

The pro football player will continue to draw his $13.1 million salary, even though he will not play until the matter is resolved.

Abuse can also take the verbal form, and words can cut as deeply as a knife.

Florida State quarterback Jameis Winston, who won the prestigious Heisman Trophy last year, climbed on a table in the student union recently and screamed highly profane and obscene remarks. FSU suspended him from playing in Saturday's game against Clemson, a game which FSU barely won.

Winston stands to make millions of dollars in his pro football career but now, he has this ugly mark on his record.

As for the pro players, it's evident that a pile of money in the form of salaries and endorsements will not act as a barrier to them beating up on their women.

At least the NFL is reacting to these incidents with swift justice and suspensions.

Ray Rice, who plays for the Baltimore Ravens, was suspended this month for punching and knocking out his fiancée in a casino hotel.

A video shows Rice dragging the unconscious woman out of an elevator. He's been charged with assault, despite the fact his wife is standing by him.

But the truth of the matter is stark and real — these men are paid tons of money to make money, by being violent on the field, and not in the bedroom or kitchen.

Scores of young people look up to these professional athletes as role models and I applaud the NFL's move to suspend, or even curtail these highly lucrative careers for committing acts of domestic violence.

Steve Spurrier, the "Head Ball Coach" at the University of South Carolina, said if any of his football players beat up on women, they're playing days for him are over.

"Of course, I've had a rule here, ever since I've been here. If you ever hit a girl, you're not going to play on our team. You're finished. We're not going to have any player on our team that has done that," Spurrier said.

Well said, Coach.

Uniting to help the environment

David B. WHITLOCK
Guest Columnist

Professor and chemist Mario Molina, who along with F. Sherwood Rowland won the 1995 Nobel Prize in chemistry for their study on the diminishing ozone crisis, said the news about the improvement in the ozone level is "a victory for diplomacy and for science and for the fact that we were able to work together."

That should certainly invigorate those heading to the upcoming United Nations Climate Summit next week. Such a meeting is urgent: The U.N. reported recently that atmospheric levels of greenhouse gases surged to another record high in 2013, the increase from 2012 being the biggest one in 30 years.

The U.N. Climate Summit plans to bring in over 100 heads of state, along with CEOs and other leaders from around the world. The U.N. Secretary General is optimistic that the Summit will jump start U.N. climate treaty talks.

The Summit will be preceded on Sept. 21 by what is being called the People's Climate March. Thousands of demonstrators from more than a 1,000 organizations representing millions of people will march in New York City, demanding that world leaders take action to address human-driven climate change. They are hoping the march will do for the environmental movement what the 1963 March on Washington did for the Civil Rights Movement. The demonstrators won't have a list of demands but simply want world leaders to realize the absolute necessity of taking action against global warming.

The People's March is a result of grassroots activism. World leaders and big corporations still don't seem to get that people really do care about the environment in general and global warming in particular. They are wearied with dilly dallying world leaders and governments.

Working together, people can make a difference.

Indeed, they already have.

A few months ago local communities in New York won their appeal over the billion dollar fracking industry. Fracking is a technique used to extract gas from deep within the earth. Some believe fracking has resulted in damage to the environment including poisoned drinking water, polluted air, mysterious animal deaths, and earthquakes.

Dryden, New York's Town Supervisor Mary Ann Sumner said, "The oil and gas industry tried to bully us into backing down, but we took our fight all the way to New York's highest court. And we...won."

Sumner hopes the court's action will inspire people in other states who are "trying to do what's right for their own communities."

Indeed, communities in Colorado, Ohio, Texas, Pennsylvania, and California are taking action to guard against the environmental and public health threats of a deregulated fracking industry.

And in my little part of the world, a group of Catholic nuns, the Sisters of Loretto in Marion County, Kentucky, led the charge several months ago, galvanizing opposition that defeated a proposed pipeline carrying potentially hazardous materials through Kentucky.

Neither the nations that banned CFCs, nor the communities in New York that opposed fracking, nor the Sisters of Loretto were certain their efforts would bear fruit.

But they did it anyway because they believed it was the right thing to do.

Let's hope the actions of the people gathering for the People's Climate March and those convening at the U.N. Climate Summit will bear fruit as well.

If nations lose this opportunity to unite against global warming, our earth may, in the not so distant future, have little fruit to bear.

Casey Hospital files lawsuit against medical service

By Larry Rowell
Editor

Casey County Hospital has filed a lawsuit in Casey Circuit Court alleging that a company providing emergency room doctors overbilled the hospital for services it didn't provide. The suit, filed on Friday by the Louisville firm of Lloyd and McDaniel, states that on Nov. 11, 2008, Marshall Emergency Services Associates, of Newport, Ky., entered into a contract to provide medical services — doctors for the ER at CCH. Originally agreed upon at $110 per hour, the contract was amended in July 2010 to $115 per hour.

However, the suit states that from July 2010-June 30, 2011, MESA billed CCH at a rate of $123 per hour, contrary to the provisions in the contract, resulting in an overpayment of $70,080. Rusty Tungate, CEO of CCH, said that the hospital paid the increased invoices until June 2011. CCH discovered the alleged discrepancy six to eight months ago. "There was a physician they insisted to be the director of the ER and we didn't want him. And they wouldn't consider anyone else. That was part of the reason they wanted more money on the rate was to provide a director of the

ER. We already have a director — Dr. Hadaad is our director," Tungate said. "We didn't agree to it and they billed it anyway." Tungate said that CCH now uses Inspire, a medical company from Louisville that the hospital is very pleased with in the ER. CCH is seeking repayment of $70,080 from MESA, plus interest at the annual rate of 8 percent from June 30, 2011 to the date of judgment, attorney's fees and other relief CCH may be entitled to under the law. A lawsuit represents the plaintiff's side of an issue. MESA has yet to file its response to the complaint.

Tarter teams up with rodeo stars to promote breast cancer awareness

By Todd Kleffman
The Advocate Messenger

Cooper Harne's eyes lit up and got big as his belt buckle when he laid eyes on Sadie Lynn in the lobby of Tarter Farm and Ranch Equipment's headquarters. Cooper, 4, has had a pretty serious crush on the razzle-dazzle rodeo rider ever since his mom, Tonya, was diagnosed with breast cancer about a year ago and the two of them started watching The All-American Cowboy Chicks on Youtube and television. "After I was diagnosed, I had some friends who work at Tarter and they started talking about the pink gates and we've been watching them ever since," said Tonya, who lives in Clementsville in western Casey County. "Coop will sit and watch them all night. He loves them." Cooper got a chance to love on the Cowboy Chicks — Sadie, her mom Trish Lynn and sister Hattie Claire Lynn — Sept. 16 when the Texas trio visited Tarter to watch as some of the company's farm products were painted pink to promote breast cancer awareness. Sadie was diagnosed with breast cancer herself four years ago when she was slow to recover from injuries she suffered during a nasty fall while performing "acrobatics on horseback," as she describes her rodeo routine. "They thought it was a cyst at first. It was misdiagnosed because I was so young," explained Sadie, 22. The lump turned out to be a malignant phyllodes tumor, a rare, incurable form of breast cancer. Sadie continues regular treatment and faces a likely double mastectomy in the future, but doesn't let that stop her from performing at rodeos nearly every weekend while raising money for families dealing with cancer. The Lynn family's talents — Trish is a singer who has recorded in Nashville — coupled with Sadie's courageous battle with cancer have made the Cowboy Chicks stars on the rodeo circuit and landed them a television series on RFD-TV called "Never Quit." It has also led them to a partnership with Tarter promoting the company's equine products such as gates, feeders and corral panels. For the second year, Tarter is sponsoring "Sadie's Ride for the Cure," during which it paints some of its products bright pink and donates some of the proceeds from sales to the Cowboy Chicks' cancer charities. Tarter Executive Vice President Ann Tarter decided to partner up with the Cowboy Chicks about four years ago, when she was looking for "the toughest girls out there" to endorse the company's products. "We've got all these men around here. We needed some women to rep our equine brands and show how tough they are," Tarter explained. Last year, the company sold 1,600 custom-ordered pink pieces and raised more than $10,000 for the cause. Once a week during August, September and October (Breast Cancer Awareness Month), Tarter runs pieces through the "powder room" to get a pink coat and ships them out to retailers across the country like Tractor Supply, Southern States and others. "At first, the employees were kind of shocked — 'Pink? What the ...' — but when they learned the story behind it, they were all thrilled," Tarter said. "They touch thousands of products every day, but they know when a pink piece goes out, it is touching people's lives. They are proud of that." For the Lynns, meeting cancer families like the Harnes is one of the highlights of their careers. They also enjoy seeing pink gates and feeders dotting the countryside as they travel, logging more than 100,000 miles a year. "In Great Falls (Montana), we met a lady who told her husband that all she wanted for Christmas was a pink gate," Trish said. Tarter said the pink product campaign has proved good for business while being good for the soul. "Long after October is gone, people look out on their pasture and see that pink gate and it keeps them motivated," she said.

68 Jamboree alive and well

Marion County venue features Casey County talent

By Nick Schrager
Landmark News Service

There's an old saying that goes: "Only time will tell." For the 68 Jamboree, time has been extremely gracious. For the last four and a half years, the 68 Jamboree, which is four miles outside of Lebanon, has been a venue for country musicians from near and far. William Weatherford, 86, and Libby Myers, 75, opened the 68 Jamboree on Dec. 12, 2009, as a place for people who do not drink but still want to have a good time. The family oriented location is alcohol, smoke, drug and weapons free. Weatherford, a retired vocational teacher from Harrodsburg, said he started the place because he's always loved country music. "He said he always wanted to get into country music," Myers said. "I said 'Well, you're not getting any younger so if you want to do it you'd better do it.'" On their first night, the venue seated 41 people, but on their second night, they only had 19. Since their humble beginnings, Weatherford and Myers have filled their theater style seats several times to maximum capacity. On average nights, they get 140-150 people for the shows, and most of them aren't from around here, Weatherford said. "You come out here on Saturday night, go out there and look at the cars' license plates, better than 80 percent of them are from out of county," Weatherford said. Myers said the people from Marion County who do come really support their business. Both Weatherford and Myers run the business on their own, mostly. They have help with computer work and various other tasks, but Myers said she does all of the bookkeeping, sells tickets and even works in the snack bar. "We love it," Myers said. "It's a lot more work than either one of us had anticipated, but on Saturday nights that three-hour show goes by in a heartbeat." While the 68 Jamboree books acts from all over, one act has always stayed the same — the 68 Drifters. John McQueary, the band's master of ceremonies, said it's been great to watch the 68 Jamboree grow since it started. "It amazes me the amount of talent that is here Central Kentucky," McQueary said. Phillip Clarkson is the band's bass player. He said he comes to the 68 Jamboree and plays with the band because it's good music that he grew up on. Though the music is not the only thing that keeps him there. "It's good people here," Clarkson said. He said he's glad to be a part of it and hopes it continues for many years to come. Danny Bailey is the 68 Drifter's sound technician. He has been with the band for the last four years. He said he likes the 68 Jamboree because it's a safe environment. "You're looking at a guy that was on the road for a long time," Bailey said. "I've played clubs, bars, casinos, and theaters, and monster stages. But what I like about this place is it's consistent. It's safe. There's no drinking, no smoking. You don't have to worry about fights."

John McQueary, who lives in Casey County and is the master of ceremonies for the 68 Drifters Band, warmed up the crowd with his rhythmic guitar and vocals.

He added the band is excellent and they have the right attitude and act professionally. Much like the talent that come from near and far, the 68 Jamboree's fan base is also broad. That's because anyone from young children to the retirees can be seen in the crowd. Bernard and Henrietta Edwards are what you could call regulars. In fact, they've been going to the 68 Jamboree since it opened. Henrietta said she likes the social atmosphere and that they have only missed a handful of shows. Bernard said the environment is friendly and homelike. Sue Browning has gone to the 68 Jamboree for the last three years, though not every weekend. "I'm just so glad we have good, local entertainment," Browning said. "This is close to home." She said the place stands out from anywhere else in town because the guests are friendly. "They make you feel like family," Browning said. For those interested in coming to the 68 Jamboree, they start selling tickets at 5 p.m. on Saturday evening, and the shows are scheduled to start at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10, though children 12 and under are free. Seating is on a first come, first serve basis.

NEWS FROM AROUND Kentucky

Firefighter's funeral set for Wednesday

Central Kentucky News Journal

The funeral for Campbellsville Fire & Rescue Captain Tony Grider will be today (Wednesday, Sept. 24) at noon EDT at Columbia Christian Church in Columbia.

Surrounded by friends and family, Grider took his last breath Saturday afternoon.

Grider's death comes about a month after he and three other Campbellsville Fire & Rescue firefighters were injured while helping with an ALS ice bucket challenge on the Campbellsville University campus.

Grider, 41, a captain who lived in Columbia, died Saturday at about noon, and his body was transported from the University of Louisville burn center to a Grissom-Martin Funeral Home in Columbia.

Firefighters and other law enforcement personnel lined I-65 from Louisville to Columbia as Grider's body was brought to the funeral home. The caravan left Louisville at about 4 p.m. and came through Campbellsville at about 6.

Grider's friends and family were with him as he died. His family members agreed to take him off the life support machines that were breathing for him.

Grider and Firefighter Alex Quinn, 22, were at the burn center receiving treatment since they were injured on Aug. 21.

Quinn was released from the hospital last week and has since returned home.

Firefighter Alex Johnson and Captain Steve Marrs were also injured that day. They were treated and released and have since returned to duty.

The investigation into what happened is continuing.

Preliminary investigation revealed that, as the bucket came close to a power line, it crossed the electric energy threshold and an electric arc was created. The arc struck Grider and Quinn.

Marrs, 37, and Johnson, 28, assumed control of the ladder in an attempt to lower it to the ground. In the process, they received electrical shocks from current traveling down the ladder.

Since the four were injured, the community has banded together to raise money and support Grider and Quinn.

Campbellsville Fire & Rescue Chief Kyle Smith stated in a news release that the firefighters' families want to thank the community for its support.

the Lebanon Police Department and was apprehended after a short foot pursuit, according to Sheriff Jimmy Clements.

Jailer Brady said McQueen was armed with a gun, but he was apprehended safely and is being held in the Marion County Detention Center. His bond has been set at $5,000.

Pending charges include third-degree escape, failure to comply with sex offender registry, first-degree robbery, possession of a handgun by a convicted felon, second-degree fleeing or evading police, resisting arrest and carrying a concealed weapon.

McQueen's criminal history also includes first-degree sexual abuse of a 13-year-old.

Sheriff Clements is outraged that McQueen was released unsupervised from jail.

"I absolutely can not believe that he would be released unsupervised," Clements said. "It's unbelievable to me that the judge and the prosecutors would sign off on releasing him unsupervised with the serious criminal charges that he's had. At the same time, I'm not surprised because there have been others who have been released with serious criminal charges."

Taylor schools get $11M in urgent-needs funds

Central Kentucky News Journal

Three years after an inspection commissioned by the Kentucky Department of Education determined that Taylor County Elementary School was in deteriorating condition and a health hazard, the Taylor County School District is set to receive $11.9 million in urgent needs funds. Taylor County Schools Superintendent Roger Cook said recurring problems with mold, flooding and overcrowding at TCES have been a top concern for the District for several years.

With more than 1,200 students, TCES is the largest elementary school in the state. The building was constructed in 1939 with additions in 1955 and 2004. The School Facilities Construction Commission, which administers urgent needs funding, recently identified Taylor County as one of 10 Kentucky districts to receive funding.

A school district's eligibility is determined by three factors. The district must have levied a nickel tax and be included in the Parson's report of the poorest schools in the state. If that tax, along with state matching funds, aren't enough to pay for the district's new schools, it qualifies for urgent needs money.

Because TCES is the only school in the district that meets the second requirement, the urgent needs money can only be used for facilities that house elementary students.

"But that should give us everything we need on the elementary school," Cook said. "I say that cautiously because you never know how the bids will come back."

Cook said the District's available funding for the other construction and renovation projects is $23,425,000.

The District's facilities plan calls for building a pre-school through second grade primary center on the current middle and high school campus and a new high school on the district's KY 210 property. The district's middle and high school buildings would be remodeled, with the current TCMS building housing grades three through five, and the current TCHS building housing the middle school. In the plan, the elementary school building would no longer be used.

Inmate's unsupervised release for medical visit unbelievable

Lebanon Enterprise

Johnny Ray McQueen, 51, a registered sex offender who was also indicted for robbery in connection with the March 20 armed robbery at Cash-A-Check in Lebanon was apprehended on Sept. 12 after being on the run since Sept. 9.

McQueen had been granted a court ordered medical furlough by Marion Circuit Judge Alan Bertram to go to the doctor. He left the detention center, unsupervised, at 1 p.m. on Sept. 9, and was ordered to return by 5 p.m. He never returned, according to Marion County Jailer Barry Brady.

On Wednesday afternoon, McQueen allegedly burglarized a home located at 6001 Calvary Road, approximately six miles south of Lebanon.

McQueen was apprehended by local law enforcement near the area of Cut-Rate Liquors on Highway 289, just south of Lebanon. McQueen was spotted by Deputy Tristan Hayden and officers with

"Dogwood, what's going on?" Mom asked as I tugged the robber's shoes, keeping him secure until the cops arrived. "We heard the harmonica, and it sounded so much, uh, different, than usual and we thought we would check it out. Why are you chewing on this gentleman's shoes?"

Knowing I couldn't take the chance of letting go of the criminal to answer Mom, I looked at Chloe to explain.

"Well," Chloe began, "Woody and I were walking through the neighborhood, staying on the grass and sidewalks when we saw this man break through the window of this house. A few minutes later we saw him leave the house, so we decided to capture him and hold him until the cops arrived."

As soon as Chloe finished her explanation, the robber began to laugh. Mom and Dad have taught us we are never to be disrespectful to anyone, so I didn't respond to his laughter, although I knew he wouldn't be laughing when he went to jail.

"I do declare I've moved to the most plumb perfect neighborhood" the robber said. "My name is Bo Blackford, and I just moved here two days ago. I ran to the hardware store earlier, and my mind was a-fluttering and I locked my keys in the car. My only other set of car keys was in the house, but I couldn't unlock the house because my house key was on my key ring that was locked in the car."

His explanation reminded me of the old lady who swallowed the bird to catch the spider that caught the fly ... or did she swallow the spider to catch the bird? Anyway, the interesting sound to this man's voice plus the funny phrases he said had me confused. Still, he didn't need to finish the explanation. I had overreacted. Letting go of his shoelace, I apologized for jumping to conclusions. Then we each introduced ourselves.

"Young man," Mom said with a twinkle in her eye and a grin on her face, "aren't we always asking you to listen instead of jumping to conclusions? It seems to me your new fascination has caused your imagination to go into overdrive."

"Fascination?" Mr. Blackford asked.

"Yes," Dad said. "Woody has fallen in love with these stories about a boy named Jack. Jack always seems to find himself in a pickle, but in the end he catches a grizzly bear, outsmarts a giant and even catches some robbers." With that last sentence, Dad winked at me.

"I know Jack," Mr. Blackford replied.

"You know Jack?" Chloe and I responded in perfect unison.

"Why sure! I grew up in the Appalachian region of Kentucky. Ever'body in Appalachia knows Jack!" Mr. Blackford said proudly.

"I didn't realize there was an Apple region of Kentucky," Chloe replied.

"Appalachian," Mr. Blackford clarified. "Think 'Apple-at-choo' and then change the 'choo' to a 'chin'. Now try it."

"Apple-at-chin," we both said carefully. "Now that we can say it, what does it mean?" I asked, making everyone snicker again.

"A quick little geography lesson for you free of charge," Mr. Blackford said. "Appalachia is a cultural region in the southeastern part of the United States that reaches from northern Mississippi, Alabama, and Georgia to the southern tier of New York State. Here in Kentucky, 54 counties are part of the Appalachian region. Appalachia is known for its strong roots, functional art, dulcimer music, folk tales and, most of all, its good people."

"I bet Jack's one of those good people, right Mr. Blackford?" I asked, wanting to know about my newfound hero. "Do you know Jack's family too? Do they live close to you in the Apple-at-choo, uh, chin, region?"

Rebels drop a close one to Lincoln County, 35-28

By Rita “Peat” Harris
Sports Correspondent

The Rebels evened their record Friday in a heart-breaking loss to Lincoln County. After overcoming an early deficit, costly mistakes resulted in a 35-28 loss.

“You’ve just got to make plays and win the game,” said Coach Sam Marple. “We had a 5A team and we had them and we just let it slip away because of mistakes.”

Lincoln opened the game with two touchdowns. One came on their first drive with the second resulting from a Casey County fumble. They led 14-0 only nine minutes into play.

“There was about a 20 or 30 second period there where I was wondering what was going to happen,” said Marple. “I’ve seen our kids with the look in their eyes when I can tell they were done, but they didn’t have that and I knew they were fine. They went right back to work and they pulled off 21 straight points.”

Quarterback Breece Hayes ran the ball in for Casey’s first touchdown before the quarter ended.

The Rebels began the second quarter with a solid drive, ending in a nine-yard touchdown run by sophomore Gary Propes, followed by a two-point conversion by sophomore Collin Miller.

The score was leveled, 14-14.

The first lead for Casey came at 4:26 in the half. Hayes connected with Luke Patterson for a 13-yard touchdown reception. The extra point by Patterson made the score 21-14.

Unfortunately, the Rebels did not hold onto the lead. Lincoln’s final drive of the half led to a touchdown, evening the tables, 21-21.

Lincoln started the second half with an impressive drive which Casey answered with an equally impressive defensive performance.

Casey put up the first points of the half with Miller running a 20-yard touchdown.

Patterson’s extra point put Casey up 28-21.

The Rebel defense again stopped Lincoln, but it was shortly followed by a Casey fumble, recovered by the Patriots.

The fumble recovery led to a successful start to the fourth quarter for Lincoln. With 9:47 remaining in the game Lincoln made it to the end zone. The score was 28-28.

Errors plagued Casey’s next drive. A face mask penalty was followed moments later by a delay of game penalty and soon possession was back to the Patriots.

The defense stepped up for the Rebels again and Lincoln was forced to punt. With the opportunity to take the lead in the final minutes, Hayes threw his first interception of the night.

The error resulted in a drive that saw the final touchdown of the game. With 28 seconds on the clock Lincoln went ahead to win 35-28.

“We had the better team on the field and we lost and that’s what disappoints me,” said Marple. “We made enough plays to win that game if we’d just cut out these focus errors and penalties.”

Casey ended the night with three fumbles, two of which led to Lincoln touchdowns.

They also had two interceptions and had six penalties.

Casey finished with 244 total yards, 141 of those on the ground. Miller led the run game with 61 yards on 11 carries. Hayes connect-

Casey golfers take second place in conference play

Vaughn cards a 78, makes Second Team All Conference

By Rita “Peat” Harris
Sports Correspondent

The young Rebel golf team continues to have their most successful season in recent years.

Casey earned second place in the conference match on Saturday in Stanford with middle school stand-out, Stone Vaughn, making Second Team All-Conference.

“It gives the boys an idea of what they can do, what they can be, and what they can achieve when they play smart and as a team,” said Coach Marshall Forbes.

Vaughn led Casey in their second place finish with a score of 78. As a team, they shot 335.

“As we were headed to Dix River Saturday morning I gave them a score to shoot,” said Forbes. “They could shoot three strokes more than that score, and only one didn’t shoot what I ask them to shoot.”

Colton Patterson shot an 80 as the team’s second best individual performance. Ethan Ammons and Justin Russell shot 85 and 88, respectively, to round out the Casey’s team score. Hayden Bastin also competed for the Rebels and finished with an 89.

Rebel golfers played an impressive conference match on Saturday at Dix River Country Club in Stanford, finishing second, just behind Rockcastle County. Stone Vaughn, shown here with Coach Marshall Forbes, shot a 78 and made the second team all conference.

Casey and took home the conference title.

“They were the only team we lost to in conference this year,” said Forbes. “I was very proud of the way they handle the pressure of the scores I was asking from them to shoot. I will use the same approach for regions.”

The conference match was Casey’s final competition prior to the regional tournament, which will take place on Monday.

Cross country runners finish strong in recent matches

By Rita “Peat” Harris
Sports Correspondent

Casey County runners competed in two events last week, seeing new season bests from several athletes.

Mercer County

Only a handful of Casey runners competed at Anderson Dean Park on Sept. 16, as most had just raced a 5K only three days prior; however, the entire team traveled to the meet to get a look at this year’s regional course.

Whitney Clements was the only varsity girl to compete. She finished fourth in a time of 22:32.

“Whitney rocked the Mercer County race,” said Vaughn.

Three boys competed in the 5K, including Blake Durham who had a break through race and season best after suffering set-backs over the past year due to breathing issues. He finished 13th in a time of 19:35.

Fairgrounds Frenzy

The running Rebels spent Saturday at the Fairgrounds Frenzy in Elizabethtown, a first time meet for the team.

“It was a very competitive meet which is why we came,” said Coach Jon Vaughn. “It was a very fast and fun meet.”

Eighth grader Jenna Vaughn finished 12th in a field of 162 varsity runners with her season-best time on Saturday.

“We did not run in the JV field, which was very big and (Jenna) beat all of their runners...so actually (she placed 12th) out of about 300,” said the coach.

Clements came in less than a minute behind Vaughn at 26th place in a time of 22:50.

“Alyssa (Sharp) was still the big story,” Coach Vaughn said. Sharp ran 24:14, which Vaughn said proved her previous performance at the E.G. Plummer invitational was not a fluke. “I am so proud of her. She worked hard all summer after track (season).”

Breanna Davison and Sabrina Ipock also scored for the Lady Rebels. Casey finished 11th among the 19 teams.

“The girls are ranked second in Region 5 right now,” said Vaughn.

Noah Brown finished in the top 50 of the 190 boys competing. He placed 44th in a time of 19:09.

“The boys that ran did good, but two were sick and did not run,” said Vaughn. Chase Williams and Matt Bradley were both unable to compete.

Durham finished in 20:07, suffering from a cold, but the coach was pleased his breathing issues did not resurface. Also scoring for Casey were

Nate Goode, Shaun O’Hair and Harley Byrd.

The team competed in the Boyle County Invitational yesterday. See next week’s paper for results.

The team will be hosting the annual Apple Festival 5K this Saturday in Liberty, open to participants of all ages. They will then run in the Central Kentucky Conference meet on Tuesday at Lincoln County.

Casey soccer team ‘seeing growth’

By Rita “Peat” Harris
Sports Correspondent

Lady Rebel soccer took two more losses last week, falling in two district matches. The team is now 1-5.

“Though losing is hard to accept, seeing the growth that these girls are making is rewarding, and that makes the future look promising,” said Coach Loren Pennington.

Somerset

Casey fell 10-0 to Somerset on Sept. 16 to the Somerset Lady Briar Jumpers (4-5).

“Our inexperience still shows,” said Pennington. “The girls have continued to show streaks of great execution but they still have room for improvement.”

Goalie Stephanie Blackwood blocked 11 of 21 shots on goal and as a team, Casey had six shots on goal.

Pulaski County

After falling 8-0 to Pulaski in a rough game only a week prior, Casey put up a strong performance on Saturday against the Lady Maroons (8-3), who are ranked third in the 12th Region. The Lady Rebels lost 6-1.

“(The girls) got the attention of many with their strides of improvement,” said Pennington.

Blackwood stopped 19 goals throughout the game. Four of Pulaski’s goals came in the first half, while Casey’s defense improved in the second half, only allowing two goals.

The Lady Rebs had 11 shots on goal, as opposed to the two they managed in their Sept. 20 game against the Maroons. Cierra Woodrum scored Casey’s lone goal on a penalty kick.

The team traveled to Garrard County yesterday. See next week’s paper for results. They will play McCreary Central on Monday.

VolleyRebs win grueling match, despite unruly fans

By Rita “Peat” Harris
Sports Correspondent

The VolleyRebs may have only had one game last week, but it was a battle—physically, mentally and emotionally. The team left the court with a 12th Region victory, 3-2, at Garrard County on Thursday.

“We had circumstances beyond our control,” said Coach Veronica Sengkhamyong. “Their fans were horrible and the coach encouraged it.”

Casey, now 12-8, played Garrard (6-4) to five matches to determine the overall winner, with the taunting from the stands ensuing throughout.

“The refs had to stop the game two or three times to go over to the crowd,” said Sengkhamyong. “I wanted to pull my girls out and go home.”

After winning the opening match 25-22, the VolleyRebs fell 25-20 in the second match.

They dominated the third, 25-15 but struggled and fell 25-21 in the fourth match, sending the teams into a final fifth game.

It was the first time Casey has played to a fifth match this season.

“They were mentally and emotionally drained from how many games we’ve had (over the last week),” said Sengkhamyong. “Our girls played good, but it just was hard with the fans trying to get in your head.”

The VolleyRebs sealed the triumph in a 15-9 final victory.

“Kelli (Wilson) and Cydney (Warner) are still not up to par but they played well,” said Sengkhamyong on the two previously injured seniors. “We still have a few issues of not

Scouting for a successful deer hunt

Work, family and school commitments can leave little free time in a day, but hunters can help themselves by carving out some time to scout an area.

Kentucky’s archery season for deer is underway with the crossbow, youth-only firearm, muzzleloader and modern gun deer seasons still to come. So there’s time to find a place to hunt and scout it.

“I think it increases your odds of success and your chances for a big deer,” said Chad Miles, an avid deer hunter and executive director of the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Foundation.

Studying topographical maps and satellite imagery is a good first step to learning the lay of the land and scouting more efficiently. But there’s no substitute for personal experience; walking the terrain; seeing where the deer bed, what’s available for them to eat and what routes they travel.

“If you can spend enough time at the property, know how deer move through it,” said David Yancy, deer biologist with Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. “Where are the chokepoints? Know the creek drainage pattern. The low spot on the ridgeline? That’s where they’re going to cross because it’s less effort. Those kinds of things are important during gun season.”

Miles prefers scouting around midday and no closer than two weeks before he plans to hunt. Any later risks spooking the deer. To limit human scent left behind, wear rubber boots and be mindful about touching or handling tree branches and leaves. Some may prefer to wear scent control clothing or spray.

Tracks, droppings and hair caught on fencing are tell-tale signs deer are in the area. Rub lines and scrapes are additional clues that show up as deer transition from their summer pattern. Deer become less visible in open spaces as acorns begin to hit the ground and the rut approaches. After the rut, available food sources and cover become all-important.

“If you’re not hunting big, timbered areas, you’re looking for bottleneck areas where you’ve got thickets near fence lines that connect forage areas,” Miles said. “Big deer are going to do their absolute best to remain out of sight as much as they can until the rut makes them crazy. They’re going to slip through those little areas where they’re going to be visible the least amount of time. I’m looking for those types of areas if I’m scouting for gun season.”

A handheld Global Positioning System (GPS) is a handy tool that can help a hunter keep track of these key spots and potential tree stand locations.

When considering a stand location, note the wind direction. This is easily accomplished with wind direction powder or by simply crumbling a dried leaf and tossing it into the air. Checking the weather online the day of a hunt can help determine where to set up.

“The quicker you can get to that stand and get your scent off the ground and create as little disturbance as possible, the best chance you’re going to be successful going after that big deer,” Miles said.

On wildlife management areas and Otter Creek Outdoor Recreation Area, hunters may use a portable stand or climbing device as long as it does not injure a tree. Nails, spikes, screw-in devices, wire or tree climbers cannot be used to attach a tree stand or climb a tree. Portable stands may not be placed in a tree more than two weeks before opening day and must be removed within a week after the last day of each hunting period. The hunter’s name and address should be clearly marked on the portable stand.

Archery season for deer in Kentucky continues through Jan. 19, 2015. Hunters set September harvest records in each of the past three seasons and the numbers indicate this season is off to another strong start. Archers reported taking more than 3,100 deer as of Sept. 18 with antlered deer making up roughly one third of the harvest total.

The crossbow deer seasons are Oct. 1-19 and Nov. 8-Dec. 31, while the youth-only firearms season for deer is Oct. 11-12. Muzzleloader season is Oct. 18-19 and Dec. 13-21. Statewide modern gun deer season opens Nov. 8 and continues through Nov. 17 or Nov. 23, depending on the zone.

Education Commissioner visits Casey County

Dr. Terry Holliday, Commissioner of Education for the Kentucky Department of Education, made a stop in Casey County Friday as part of his "listening tour." During this tour, Holliday is taking his associates to a large, medium, and small district to listen to the superintendent and key central office staff, so the district leadership team can interact with the KDE leadership team and learn from each other. Holliday and Casey County Superintendent Marion Sowders observed Ellen Allen's class at Walnut Hill Elementary during his trip to Casey County.

City

Continued from front period, you're out of compliance and you can write a citation," he said.

As for the city mowing a property and then billing an owner, Dial said it has happened, but only rarely.

The warning letters specified that if an owner was having problems getting their property cleaned up, they could contact City Hall and try to work out a solution.

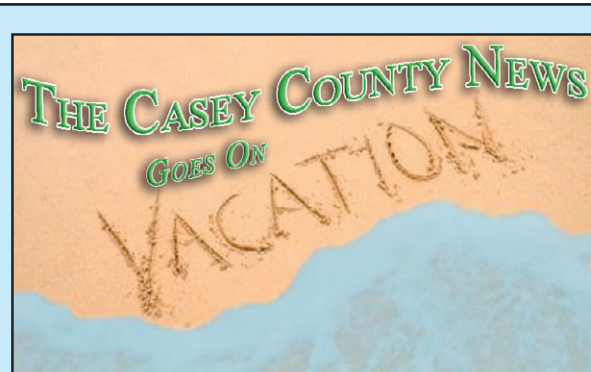

Mayor Steve Sweeney said that the purpose of the warning letters isn't to fine people.

"If there's some legitimate reason why they can't get their property cleaned up, we want to help. We just don't want to be punitive about it. That's what city government should be about even when they're in violation, we don't want to punish people, we just want to get it corrected," Sweeney said.

Drema Thompson and Bonnie Meeks took The Casey County News along on a trip to Gatlinburg on July 4.
